

LIFTING PROHIBITION

Recently, the Obama regime did an about-face against the populist movement to legalize nature - cannabis (marijuana) and announced that by mid November all manufacturers, and distributors, clinics on the West Coast are to cease and desist in growing and dispensing cannabis, or face the brutes of state burning crops, battering-down doors, and torturing doctors, terminally ill patients, and others with the mental duress of threats of imprisonment; and of course the forfeiture of property; and that is what government in need of finances is after.

Growing and ingesting cannabis is rational and natural right indicative of the symbiotic relationship between this plant and human development. Making war on nature and notions of liberty is an indicator of despotism perversely “pushed” against the democratic will of the majority indicated by credible surveys showing people support the decriminalization of cannabis. The War on Drugs, imposed upon ourselves, is an obvious enterprise of deadly lies justifying the criminality and ignorance of human rights through the creation of the prison-industrial complex in need of dispensing the alchemy of moral corrections upon hostages caught having an affair with a substance!

America was built upon the foundations of organized gangs of ethnic and class types – that is why the movie “The Godfather” resonated with the public. This economic model manages all contraband and its vast revenues accelerating their flow to her shores, without them – she’s impoverished, unable to build her cities of pipe and steel. Many say that if government legalized marijuana and decriminalized drug usage, the tax revenues would flow to the brim. That is true, but government keeps drug usage illegal so it can guarantee the capture of revenue in the form of fines and asset seizures to its own coffers. It is an immoral, insane situation of flesh and blood, being locked-up in cages and poked by the sticks of the artificiality of a new, cold drug – the blood, sweat and tears of destroyed lives as the fuel to create cursed money for companies and a judicial system heavily invested in the business of moral entrepreneurship: e.g., judges owning stock in the companies that build and manage the prisons – hence a motive to incarcerate people to enhance the performance of a financial portfolio.

Every credible group of professionals from medical doctors, economist, social scientist, and political activist has formally endorsed the idea of lifting prohibition. The medical community is tired of a plant with multiple medicinal properties being exorcised from the pharmacopeia of medicines; the economist are tired of the social cost of criminalizing a plant, a policy which is the excrement of poisons that gives rise to gangsters; social scientists are tired of a policy that brutalizes citizens while growing the largest prison-industrial complex among all societies; and political activist like Libertarians are tired of the idea of liberty being assaulted, battered, then locked-up.

BY HUBERT KLEINPETER, PHD

America reflects her medieval, puritanical roots when she irrationally makes nearly all substances of nature illegal to consume. It is the primitive, dangerous mindset that obstructs the rational replacement of the prison-industrial complex with educational and medical policies to manage drug addictions. What is a criminal complaint? How can a small group of oppressive technocrats, brutes armed with ignorance, lies and dangerous weapons be the originating source of a criminal complaint? How can that situation be so if most citizens are against current drug policies, against police torturing members of their family, and certainly tired of the armed robbery committed by government stealing private property without proof of any criminal act. At one time government had to prove one was guilty – but now we have a presumption of guilt without trial, or an administrative “kangaroo court” predisposed to finding in favor of itself – the very government that commits crimes. It seems a criminal complaint needs to be served against the shysters of the Justice Department and their degenerate, extortionist agency, the DEA; an organization riddled with liars, thieves and the ignorant reigning tyranny down upon the good.

Now this critical view on the war on drugs as a war on the citizens, applies to the international policy of the Americans. The American west was settled by a pioneering spirit of bibles, guns, and bottles of whiskey. Christians felt that they were to Christianize the heathens – or kill them off. And today we see a similar attitude, but its form has changed a bit. But the American power center like an immature alcoholic, a selfish child with candy, may not be capable of evolving to that level of rational policy making. How can a tortured bully addicted to smashing down other cultures with excessive war making ever change when the power structure prospers on misery? As the price of inter-relating with a puritanical society constantly engaged in “witch hunts, to purify scourges of her making, all nations must prescribe to self inflicted poisons of “zero tolerance” on indigenous plants like cannabis, opium, peyote, coca leaves; indigenous nature which defines many a culture like Afghanistan, Peru and Bolivia.

These policies are in effect, a war on cultures that have long suffered the psychotic compulsion of the euro-American mindset to purge itself of its own nature falsely tagged as social demons; then projecting that psychosis by judging outsiders as the originating source of the drug problem – as primitives on a whole range of social indicators of modernity in need of correction. It is modern society that excels at repressing itself by battering and assaulting itself and others; more so than the supposed primitives. It is somewhat like a psychotic patient who hates himself for feeling biological impulses for pleasures labeled as sin while projecting that repression onto others. A society that religiously subscribes to “zero tolerance” on any human dilemma is one of an immature, but dangerous child run amuck on the world stage. A more mature society knows that it is better to teach and practice “everything in moderation, nothing in excess.” And with orthodox religious beliefs holding the instruments of government hostage – defining the nature of the political business of moral entrepreneurship- that may never happen unless secularists can free them – before the rationalists are imprisoned.