

NFL TOUCH DOWN - A LOW DOWN

I recently went to an NFL Football game in Miami, Florida; a game between the Dolphins and the Texans. But the “Fishes” freedom to swim to victory was speared on the field by the Texans. But these Texas Rangers blowing into town seemed symbolic of the worst of all that has, like wildfires on the plains – come out of Texas searing the American landscape with a militant mentality that is not about liberty – but about capitulation to the Sheriff of Nottingham owning you as a slave of state - and that includes rights to assault your body.

When I approached the stadium, I was immediately taken with the armed gangs of police; mostly men with shaved heads, spindly legs, yet upper bodies built upon a diet of testosterone and steroids. They were the overseers of the uneducated, minimum wage employees “groping,” searching – touching down thousands of people for a terroristic device. Of course there had to be some ruse at pretending to be moral; so there were separate male and female lines for all to file into. I did hear joking among the men that it was a pity that they were not to be “groped” by the attractive female guard, but rather by a burly brute of a guy who they did not really trust with their “private parts.” Funny - how one is forced to rationalize it in a society preoccupied with sexuality; a government that wants to make public one’s privacy in every way.

It occurred to me, that with a weak job market, that employing the semi-literate to pat-down citizens – was an employment model that cleverly had the ignorant, as a tool controlling an alienate citizenry. It is unconscionable when citizens are employed to molest the privacy of personal space in the name of safety. But lazy police targeting the private rights of the citizenry is an old practice. In lieu of the labor of investigatory police work into the conspiracies of a small group of terrorist, to pat down and search thousands of people as potential carriers of terroristic devices, is evidence of contempt for the governed that rules through sexual humiliation and fear, the basis of psychological mindset employed by a bureaucratic police-state. If modest, ethical people object to the low down of TSA – they become targeted for invasive surveillances – including sexual humiliation – a tool of degradation.

What we have is a government claiming to be the defender of the Constitution with the attached Bill of Rights, but assaulting it daily as normal practice. Like bureaucratic tyrants, it is TSA versus Liberty – an idea stated in the Constitution – but rendered obsolete. This need to increasingly conduct pat-downs in public spaces is the incremental stealing of yardage, of liberty. And since the passage of the legal foundations of the police-state – the Patriot Act, society has become conditioned to accept these practices as normal. Citizens, like sport fans, like sheep to slaughter – have unlearned a respect for natural rights embossed in the Bill of Rights. A public not educated in its own political foundations based on the idea of Liberty, are becoming oblivious that this intrusion into our end zones – is a score against liberty – and a victory for tyranny.

Federal policy has co-opted any rebellion of the public by subtly making the sport fan part of the team, a government team that favors stripping citizens of constitutional protections – of forsaking God given rights. Unlike the neutered claims of the Bill of Rights, citizens are no longer secure in their own person. Citizens are no longer treated as innocent until proven guilty, with the right to face their accusers – in this case – the all seeing voyeur eye of tyrannical bureaucracy. The apparent assumption by Homeland Security is - citizens are the face to watch deemed as potential enemy combatants. Since the NFL partners with the police state - citizens are no longer sovereign customers; and free Americans denied entrance to the big game - for their objections to government – is an assurance that fans need to know their place, as potential terrorist. As we enter the fourth quarter of Liberty on the field of battle against Tyranny, there will be little quarter remaining for her as she will be forced to émigré off-shore for sanctuary, or until the citizens rediscover their repressed knowledge of a disappeared document, the Bill of Rights and restores it to public life.

Given the lack of respect for privacy of one's mind and body embodied in governmental practices unleashing the dark side of human nature, those in law enforcement that remain silent continue to be complicit in these assaults on the public. There are police and federal agents who know better, but have become embroiled in these perversities – they need a secure chance to “step forward” and confess what they know of it - so they can qualify for amnesty – if there is a political backlash. Like toppled political regimes of the past, police claiming they are just following orders of the TSA, or NFL functionaries wanting to preserve their rights to be a “good” corporate citizen by helping along bad laws – they exercise an ignorance of law, of what is right and wrong. Perhaps after a genuine rebellion by the citizenry; after a political change, demanding accountability for many an unjust act, just “going along” as in the past will be ruled as an invalid excuses for participating in political crimes. These well documented, assaults of a perverse sexual nature by a federal agency on the public, means public employees can no longer feign ignorance – they are complicit in a sexual crime through silence. And silence gives consent. So silence - according to the circumstances – speaks. The maxim is “Qui tecat consentere.” The maxim of the law is “Silence gives consent.” If one construes what this silence means, then agents consented - did not deny their use. However, a paranoid and “dumb-down” society construes this silence, these acts according to its half wits, but the rational must construe according to the law of objectivity. Sadly, as is always the case, we are held hostage by quantity of half wits counting more than quality of wits.
